Cimarron's History

In 1979 Mike Harvey and wife Mary Lou opened a muzzle loading shop and sporting goods store in Houston, Texas known as "Bigfoot". Around this time he ordered plans for a Hawken rifle from a museum and built his first replica from scratch. By 1984 Mike had bought out Allen Firearms. Seeking to diversify their stock, Mike began selling replica Old-West firearms, starting with percussion replicas, but soon included cartridge firearms.

"We ended up in Italy because there's this valley called Val Trompia, the 'Valley of the Trumpets', where they have been making arms since the Roman days." Mike recalled. He then began meeting with Aldo Uberti of Uberti Firearms in Brescia, Italy. Mike agreed with Colt in sensing that Aldo "was the best they had ever seen in understanding the art of the gun, and how to capture that art." Aldo's son and partner Pietro, who was managing Uberti had a mutual respect for Mike and described him as "A pillar of the Uberti factory."

The gun that they started with was the Colt Single Action. Mike took an original from his collection to the Uberti factory and began shaping what they made to match the authentic Old West firearm. From the grip and frame shape, to authentic markings and eliminating the numerous proof marks that covered the guns. Harvey also had specific instructions regarding metal hardness, polishing and case hardening, ensuring that the quality, authenticity, accuracy, and durability of the firearms would be second to none.

Cimarron Firearms has since worked with other reputable manufacturers to always ensure The Highest Standards and remain the leader in quality and authenticity. Cimarron looks to the future with the addition of many more classic Old West rifles, shotguns, and handguns. Cimarron has also introduced original modern classics such as the Thunderer and Lightning models with their unique blend of classic features. In describing Cimarron's contribution to authentic cowboy guns, Old West historian Phil Spangenberger states, "To paraphrase the famed film director John Ford, 'If this isn't the way the old west six guns were, it's the way they should have been!'"

Because of the authenticity, accuracy, and durability of Cimarron's firearms, our revolvers and rifles have been used by weapons masters in just about every modern classic Western film including Tombstone, The Quick and the Dead, Quigley Down Under, remakes of True Grit and 3:10 To Yuma, and even Back to the Future III! Cimarron also offers reproductions of many classic Western film guns as part of our highly sought after "Hollywood Guns" collection.

Aside from making many of the firearms used in completive cowboy shooting, Cimarron Firearms has proudly supported both Cowboy Action Shooting and Cowboy Mounted Shooting since both sports began.

Sadly, Mary Lou passed in 2010. She is dearly missed by her family, friends, and colleagues. Mike Harvey continues to lead Cimarron into the future of the with the help of his daughter Jamie and a team of employees, many of whom have been with us 20 years or more. Cimarron is proud to have been family owned and operated since it began, and will continue to strive to bring you the highest quality historically accurate Old West firearms.

1860 Fluted .44 McCullough Model

In 1860, the Federals pulled out of Texas. Ben McCullough made a quick deal with his friend Sam Colt for the purchase of 1000 of the 1860 model to be used by Rangers protecting the western frontier. 500 of the Colts were smuggled into Texas through the Federal blockade by way of Louisiana. These fluted Army models are known as the McCullough Colts.

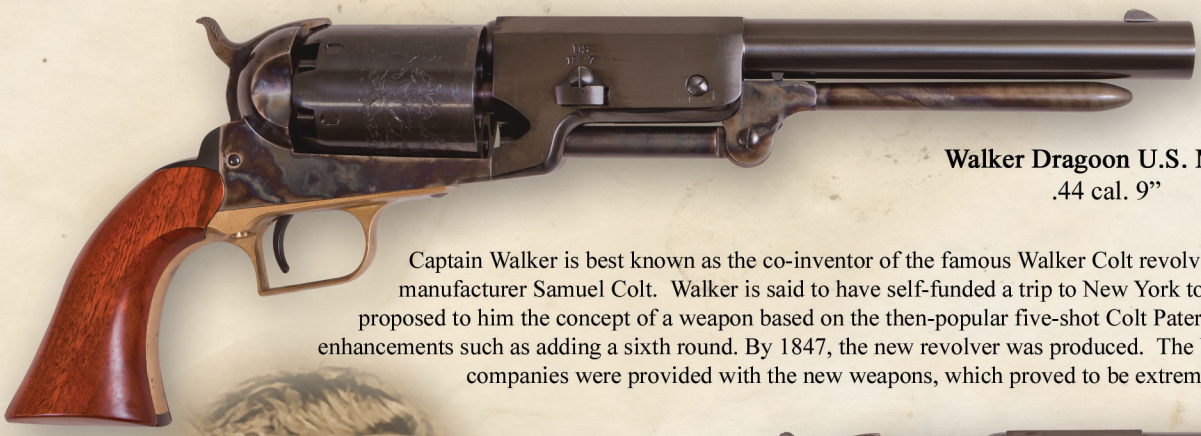
CIMARRON DRAGOON REVOLVERS

"The Colt Paterson, Col. Sam's 1st revolver, was put to test by the Republic of Texas Rangers in the late 1830s. Armed with the new Patterson revolver, fifteen Rangers in central Texas, near San Antonio at Plum Creek, defeated a fierce band of 100 marauding Comanche warriors. The battle of Plum Creek made evident the need for Col. Colt's revolver on the American frontier. Regardless, in 1838 Colt was bankrupt. In 1846, Texas Ranger Captain Sam Walker sought help from Col. Colt to strengthen Texas' limited forces during the war with Mexico. The result was the production of the Colt Walker and the return of Col. Colt to the manufacturing of the great firearms pictured on these pages. No region and no state made a greater contribution than did Texas in the making of Col. Colt's Firearms Co. No firearm played a greater role than did the Colt revolver in the making of Texas and the opening of the American West."

- Mike B. Harvey



Walker Dragoon U.S. Model
.44 cal. 9"

Captain Walker is best known as the co-inventor of the famous Walker Colt revolver, along with arms manufacturer Samuel Colt. Walker is said to have self-funded a trip to New York to meet with Colt and proposed to him the concept of a weapon based on the then-popular five-shot Colt Paterson revolver, with many enhancements such as adding a sixth round. By 1847, the new revolver was produced. The United States Mounted Rifle companies were provided with the new weapons, which proved to be extremely effective.

Pommel holsters, like the originals shown to the right, were carried across the saddles of Texas Rangers and the United States Mounted Rifle companies engaged in the War with Mexico in 1847. Each of the revolvers weighed 4.5 lbs and were much too heavy to wear as a side arm.

CIMARRON 1851-1860-1861 REVOLVERS

The heyday of the two-gun man was the era of the percussion revolver, like Cimarron's replica Colt sixguns shown here. During the War Between the States, Confederate Rangers like John "the Grey Ghost" Singleton Mosby, and his Rebel raiders packed as many Army and/or Navy six-shooters as they could carry. Armed with six to eight revolvers each, these southern horsemen repeatedly struck the Yankee army hard and fast, then like the will-o'-the-wisp, quickly vanished into the landscape.

Out west, professional gunmen like Wild Bill Hickok, Wes Hardin, and the James-Younger gang made sure they had plenty of firepower at the ready for their deadly work! You too can be a two-gun pistoleer, like the colorful shootists of yesteryear. Strap on a brace of these cap and ball six-shooters and re-win the Wild West.

CIMARRON POCKET MODEL REVOLVERS

With the public clamoring for a quality, accurate pocket-sized weapon, Colt knew he could fulfill the need. By carefully studying the big Dragoon revolver and determining what features necessary in a large belt revolver could be removed from a smaller pocket-type pistol, he eliminated about 85 of the roughly 480 separate operations required to produce his earlier sixguns, thus creating the first pocket revolver made by Colt's facility in Hartford, Connecticut. Dubbed the "Baby Dragoon," and made without a loading lever, Colt turned out about 15,000 of them between 1847-1850, and the public loved them!

Because the Wells Fargo stage lines purchased some of these Baby Dragoons, collectors have named them the "Wells Fargo Model," nonetheless, they were so popular with the miners, expressmen and gamblers along San Francisco's Barbary Coast, that the Colt factory was unable to keep up with the orders. Cimarron makes this 4-inch octagon-barreled, .31 caliber, pocket pistol with the Standard Blue, Charcoal Blue, or their Original Finish, color case hardening, and a one-piece walnut stock and brass back strap and trigger guard. This little "five-shooter" is one that any sporting gent would be proud to slip into his waistband for an adventurous turn at the tables!

CIMARRON CONVERSIONS

In 1871, Colt employee Charles Richards was awarded a patent for converting Colt percussion models to breech loading cartridge revolvers. The Richards cartridge conversion was an instant success. On July 2, 1872, William Mason, another Colt employee, was awarded a patent for an improvement to the Richards model. As percussion parts ran short, the 1860 Richards-Mason barrel was changed from the profile of the earlier percussion model to the sleek profile found on the 1871-72 Open Top.

Rather than convert the older percussion arms, the Remington factory began manufacturing their popular New Model Army revolvers as metallic cartridge guns. The 1858 New Model Army--a .44 bore handgun--was originally converted to either .46 rimfire or .44 rimfire and centerfire metallic cartridges and priced for the civilian trade at a whopping $9 per copy. On the other hand, the New Model Navy revolvers were percussion arms returned to Remington by the U.S. Navy to be converted to .38 centerfire.

CIMARRON BISLEY & MODEL P

Considered as the most authentic and highest quality reproduction of the 1873 Colt, Cimarron's replica was reproduced in every detail from an original 1873 single action in our antique collection, and was not replicated by working simply from drawings, as with previous reproductions. We also took extra steps to improve the gun's reliability with our Cowboy Comp® action which eliminates weaknesses associated with the 19th century design.

To paraphrase the famed film director John Ford, "If this isn't the way the Old West sixguns were, it's the way they should have been!" The Thunderer, a full-sized Model P, peacemaker-style single-action revolver that was designed by Cimarron founder and president Mike B. Harvey and made on the Old Model (pre-1896) frame and "bullseye" ejector head. However, as a departure from the traditional peacemaker-style arm, this six-shooter utilizes the natty birds head grip, and is much like that carried by Val Kilmer's "Doc" Holliday in the 1993 hit Western, Tombstone. Cimarron's Thunderer is available in the 4 3/4-inch barrel or the 5 1/2-inch barrel, as well as a 3 1/2-inch barreled version, that makes for a superb carry single action. This well-balanced smokewagon is offered in standard blue finish with the color case hardened frame and hammer, a .45 Colt, .45 Colt/.45 ACP dual cylinder, .44 Special, .44-40, .38 Special/.357 Magnum. The Cimarron Thunderer is a daisy!

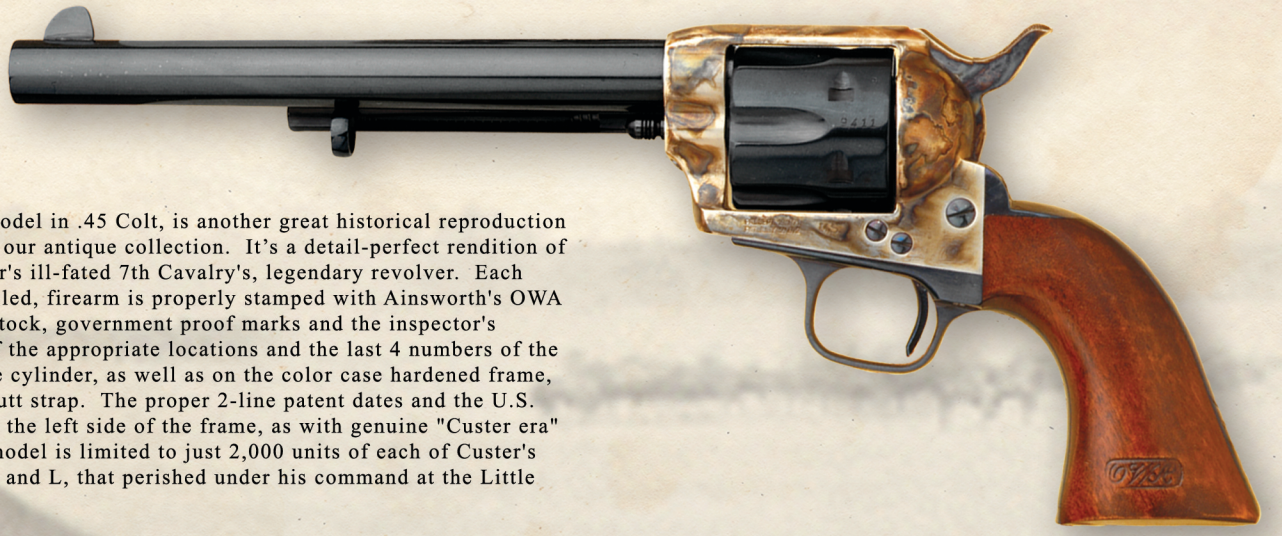
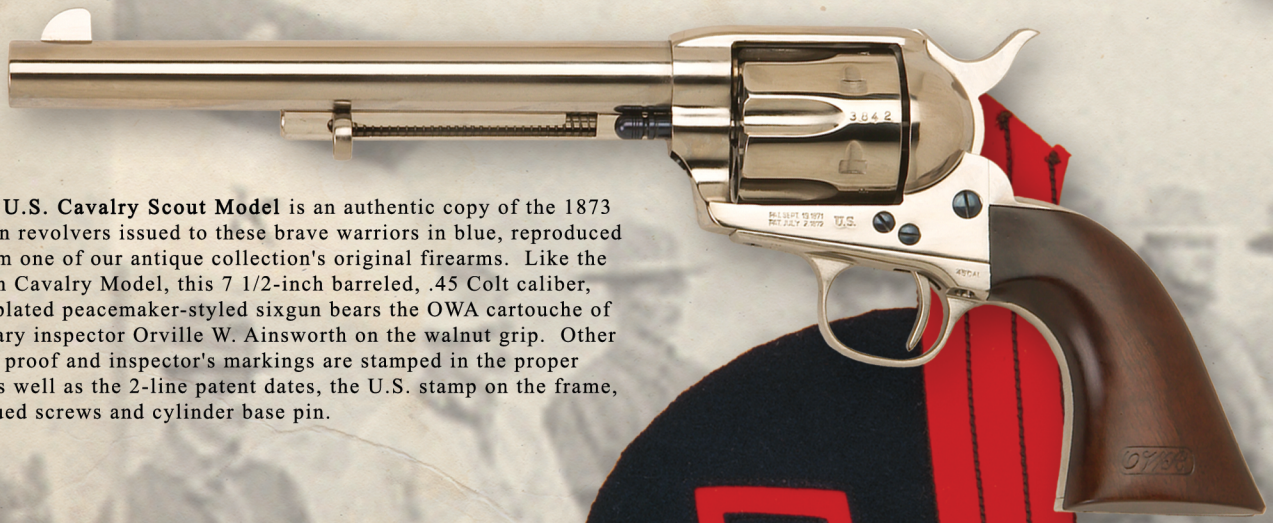
CIMARRON MILITARY MODELS



Caliber: .45 Colt
Barrel: 7 1/2”

Cimarron's 7th Cavalry model in .45 Colt, is another great historical reproduction inspired by an original in our antique collection. It’s a detail-perfect rendition of the single action of Custer's ill-fated 7th Cavalry's, legendary revolver. Each authentic 7 1/2-inch barreled, firearm is properly stamped with Ainsworth's OWA cartouche on the walnut stock, government proof marks and the inspector's initials are found in all of the appropriate locations and the last 4 numbers of the serial numbering is on the cylinder, as well as on the color case hardened frame, trigger guard and blued butt strap. The proper 2-line patent dates and the U.S. stamping is also found on the left side of the frame, as with genuine "Custer era" cavalry revolvers. This model is limited to just 2,000 units of each of Custer's five companies C, E, F, I, and L, that perished under his command at the Little Big Horn.



Cimarron's U.S. Cavalry Scout Model is an authentic copy of the 1873 single-action revolvers issued to these brave warriors in blue, reproduced directly from one of our antique collection's original firearms. Like the troopers' 7th Cavalry Model, this 7 1/2-inch barreled, .45 Colt caliber, full nickel-plated peacemaker-styled sixgun bears the OWA cartouche of 1870s military inspector Orville W. Ainsworth on the walnut grip. Other government proof and inspector's markings are stamped in the proper locations, as well as the 2-line patent dates, the U.S. stamp on the frame, and uses blued screws and cylinder base pin.

In 1898, the First Volunteer Cavalry, a colorful unit of cowboys and other adventurous young men was formed, with veteran Indian fighter Col. Leonard Wood in command and Lt. Col. Theodore Roosevelt second in command. Recruited in a San Antonio bar and trained at Camp Wood in Texas in 1898, "Teddy" Roosevelt's "Rough Riders" would carry over 100 of these Artillery models when they bravely charged up San Juan Hill in Cuba.

Here's another great historical reproduction inspired by an original in Cimarron's antique collection. Available in standard blue or Original Finish, our detail-perfect Artillery Model bears the government inspector Rinaldo A. Carr's cartouche and all martial markings, including the U.S. stamped frame, just like those reissued guns that went on to see service into the early years of the 20th century.

CIMARRON LIGHTNING® & MODEL P JR.

Designed along the lines of the classic Colt 1877 double-action revolver with it's distinctive birds head grip--the '77 Colt model was a favorite with such Old West characters as Billy the Kid, John Wesley Hardin and lady outlaws Calamity Jane and Pearl Hart. Cimarron has improved this handsome small-framed revolver by maintaining the grace and beauty of the 19th century model.

An 1873 single-action style revolver like the Model P Jr., except this slick looking six-shooter wears an all-black finish, giving it a "meant for business" look and sports a handsome brass back strap and trigger guard.

Frank James

Designed to compete with Colt's 1873 single-action, the 1875 Remington revolver has a similar, yet distinctive look all its own. Around 25,000 of these sleek six-shooters were turned out from 1875-1889, and were held in high esteem by many Westerners, including none other than the notorious outlaw Frank James, who praised its handling capabilities, as did noted 1880s Texas Ranger Bill McDonald. It was also the choice of the U.S. Department of the Interior, who purchased several hundred in 1883 as an issue sidearm to Indian police on frontier reservations.

Model 1890
Calibers: .45 Colt, .45 Colt/.45 ACP Dual Cyl., .44 WCF, .357/.38 Spl.
Barrel: 5 1/2”

With only 2,020 produced, the 1890 Remington revolver signaled the last of Remington's bid in the revolver market. Today, this handsome sixgun is a desirable, but difficult to find, very collectible firearm. Basically an 1875 model with a cutaway web under the barrel and a circular swivel/lanyard ring in the butt strap, the 1890 Remington was produced only for a few years (1891-1896) and was offered with 5 1/2-inch and 7 1/2-inch barrels.

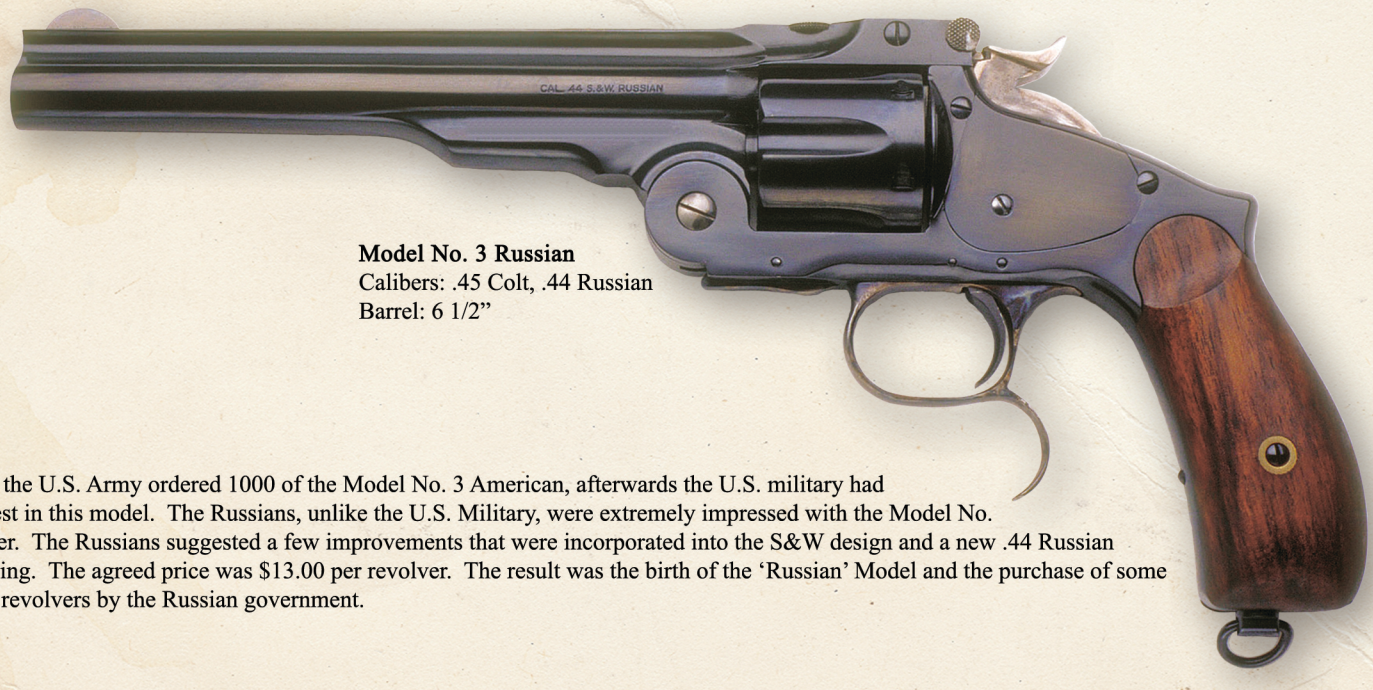
5”

Major George W. Schofield of the 10th Cavalry and an army ordinance officer, designed this revolver as an improvement over Smith & Wesson's No. 3 "American" model. Produced by S&W from 1875-1977, the U.S. Army ordered nearly 8,000 in the proprietary .45 Schofield cartridge and many saw service by the 4th Cavalry in the Geronimo campaign and by the buffalo soldiers of the 9th and 10th Cavalry. Schofields were also put to work by the notorious James-Younger gang, U.S. Marshal Bill Tilghman and Custer's chief of scouts "Lonesome Charley" Reynolds. Another roughly 1,000 guns were sold on the civilian market. Favored by many horse soldiers for its top-break, rapid ejection system, many considered it superior to the 1873 Colt Single Action for mounted work. In the 1880s, New York gun dealer Schuyler, Hartley Graham bought surplus Schofields, cut the barrels from 7 to 5 inches, and sold many of them to Wells Fargo & Company.

Cimarron offers the Model No. 3 Schofield, 2nd Model, copied directly from an original in our vast collection of antique firearms.



Model No. 3 Russian
Calibers: .45 Colt, .44 Russian
Barrel: 6 1/2”

In 1870, the U.S. Army ordered 1000 of the Model No. 3 American, afterwards the U.S. military had no interest in this model. The Russians, unlike the U.S. Military, were extremely impressed with the Model No. 3 revolver. The Russians suggested a few improvements that were incorporated into the S&W design and a new .44 Russian chambering. The agreed price was $13.00 per revolver. The result was the birth of the ‘Russian’ Model and the purchase of some 130,000 revolvers by the Russian government.

CIMARRON EVIL ROY COMPETITION SA

Made along the lines of the classic peacemaker-style revolver, like those used by the professional shootists of the Old West, Cimarron's Evil Roy Competition SA has features favored by renown SASS World Champion and SASS National Champion shooter Gene "Evil Roy" Pearcey. What sets this sixgun apart from other single actions are the wide square-notch rear sight and wide constant width front sight, along with slim checkered grips for a better and firmer hand fit, and an action tuned in the U.S. by Cimarron's skilled gunsmiths. This fine tuning incorporates Cimarron's made in USA competition hammer and trigger/bolt springs that are lighter, smoother and permit a crisp, no-creep trigger pull, and improved internal parts to enhance reliability. Each Evil Roy six-shooter wears his SASS signature, roll engraved on the barrel.

CIMARRON COWBOY COMP® U.S. ACTION JOB

Cimarron Firearms Co. is proud to offer select models with an optional Cowboy Comp® U.S. Action Job! Cowboy Comp® (CC) is a Cimarron Firearms exclusive, and can turn any of Cimarron's cartridge revolvers into a fine-tuned, competition-ready firearm. Cimarron's Cowboy Comp® U.S. Action Job comes standard with its Evil Roy, Thunderstorm®, and Eliminator Series models.

WHY CC?

From the time that Samuel Colt began manufacturing revolvers, he used a small flat spring to provide tension on the hand. This flat spring was a weak spot in the Colt design. A Cimarron Cowboy Comp® system is superior because the small flat spring was replaced with a coil spring that doesn't fatigue and is adjusted (lightened) in the action job process.

A COWBOY COMP® U.S. ACTION JOB CONSISTS OF THE FOLLOWING:

-De-burr the internal surfaces, as needed
-Install US manufactured main spring & trigger bolt spring
-Tune / Adjust trigger pull and creep
-Tune / Adjust bolt for fit and function
-Check head space and cylinder gap, adjust if necessary
-Check /adjust for proper timing and function

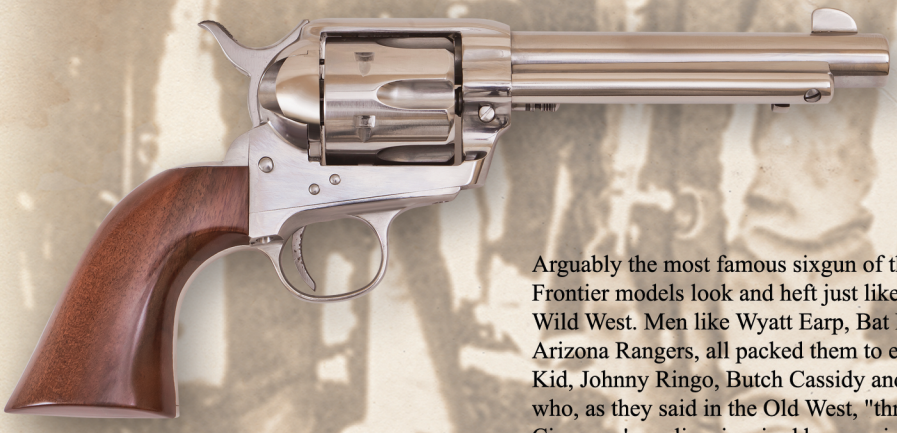
- Mike B. Harvey



Arguably the most famous sixgun of the Old West, if not the best known in the entire world, Cimarron's Frontier models look and heft just like those guns used by the famous and infamous characters of the Wild West. Men like Wyatt Earp, Bat Masterson, "Texas" John Slaughter, the Texas Rangers and the Arizona Rangers, all packed them to enforce law and order. While men such as Jesse James, Billy the Kid, Johnny Ringo, Butch Cassidy and members of his "Hole in the Wall" gang and other hombres who, as they said in the Old West, "threw a wide loop," used them to ply their lawless trade. Cimarron's replica, inspired by an original in our collection, sports the traditional blue and color case hardened finish with one-piece walnut grips. Our replicas are exact duplicates of the originals.

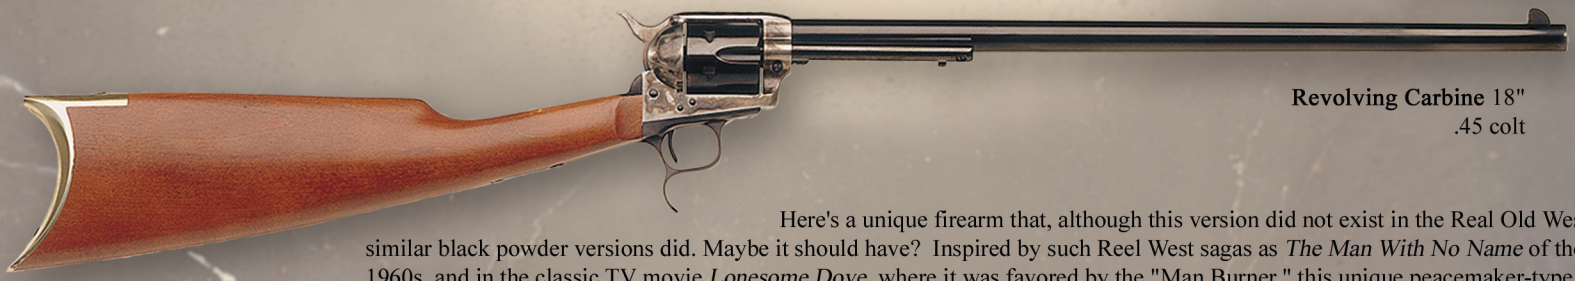
The inspiration for this piece of cinema history came from the Cimarron Firearms collection. While researching the grip material, Cimarron learned that the material had not been available for 50 years. Cimarron had the original material remade so a replica of our western hero's Colt Single Action used in many of his great Westerns, including his Oscar winning performance in True Grit, would be available to the firearms and western enthusiasts of all ages.



Revolving Carbine 18"
.45 colt

Here's a unique firearm that, although this version did not exist in the Real Old West, similar black powder versions did. Maybe it should have? Inspired by such Reel West sagas as The Man With No Name of the 1960s, and in the classic TV movie Lonesome Dove, where it was favored by the "Man Burner," this unique peacemaker-type, revolving carbine has enjoyed a history all its own! Cimarron's unique design combines the famed frontier single-action revolver, with a shoulder stock and the spur trigger guard, making this shoulder-mounted sixgun a popular choice with western buffs --especially with Cowboy Mounted Shooters in the Rifle Class competitions.

CIMARRON HOLLYWOOD GUNS-PART 3

We recreated Matthew's rifle for the adventurous souls desiring single shot rifles capable of the accuracy depicted in the epic film, Quigley Down Under. The Cimarron "Rifle From Down Under" model is a faithful reproduction of the long range rifle from that famous epic. It is every bit as accurate as the fictional character's original firearm.

For decades, the 1892 Winchester was the rifle of the Silver Screen cowboys, and none was more recognizable than the Duke's large loop lever-action 1892 carbine. As a mainstay in film after film, this rifle showed true grit, providing some of filmdom's most exciting action sequences. Cimarron's Cogburn Carbine is reminiscent of those '92 lever guns packed in so many western sagas. Fitted with a 20-inch, blued round barrel, a color case hardened receiver, large loop lever, hammer and butt plate, Big John's favorite carbine wears an American black walnut stock and is chambered for the .45 Colt (which will also handle "5-in-1" movie blanks) or the .38 Special/.357 chambering. CIMARRON SINGLE SHOT RIFLES

Billy Dixon® 32" octagon barrel

It was June 27, 1874 at Adobe Walls on the Canadian River in the Texas panhandle Billy Dixon and 27 Buffalo hunters were suddenly surrounded by more than 500 Kiowa and Comanche warriors. The Kiowa medicine man promised the bullets of the white eyes could not harm them. When Dixon fired a Sharps sporting rifle and knocked a Kiowa from his horse at 1538 yards (7/8 mile), the Indians departed with haste.

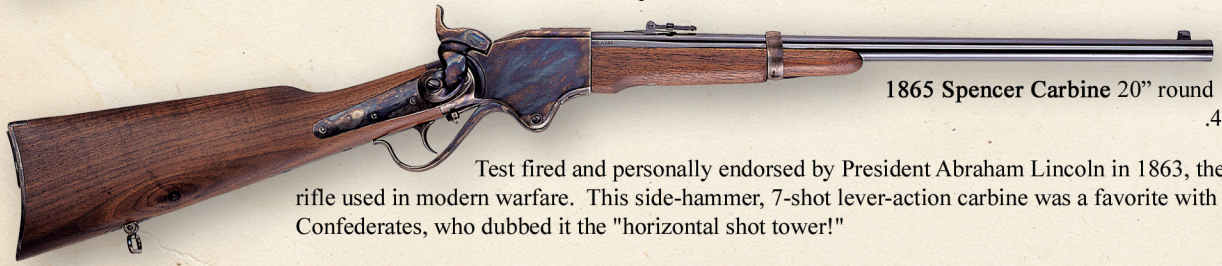
Each of the 36 original carbines were marked on the barrel by the Rangers with a 'T * S'™ and numbered as issued. The carbines are produced in the original .50-70 and .45-70 calibers. The Carbines feature case colored receivers and a blued steel barrel and parts. The wood is American black walnut as was used on the original Texas Ranger carbines.



1865 Spencer Carbine 20" round barrel
.45 Colt

Test fired and personally endorsed by President Abraham Lincoln in 1863, the Spencer was the first repeating rifle used in modern warfare. This side-hammer, 7-shot lever-action carbine was a favorite with the Union cavalry and feared by Confederates, who dubbed it the "horizontal shot tower!"

Cimarron 1860 Henry Rifles

Working with the design elements of the unsuccessful Volcanic rifle, an earlier attempt at producing a lever-action self-contained cartridge arm, Winchester plant Superintendent B. Tyler Henry designed this lever gun to handle his new .44 rimfire copper-cased cartridge. Despite only having produced somewhere around 14,000 Henrys between around 1862 and 1866, the gun was sought after by Civil War soldiers who could obtain one with a supply of ammunition. Nonetheless, this "Sixteen Shooter" proved itself in battle as well as on the frontier, and was used by many frontiersmen in the years right after the Civil War. It was used by Wells Fargo detective James Hume, Union Pacific Railroad and many other Old West notables, and more importantly, it paved the way for all future lever-action rifles up through modern times!

Having been reproduced directly from an original New Haven Arms Co. Henry, our Henry Rifle is considered by many gun savvy firearms enthusiasts as among the most handsome of all replica arms, in either the brass-framed model or the early-type Henry with the beautiful color case hardened frame, and sporting in authentically-styled, 24-inch octagonal barrel with the distinctive front-loaded tubular magazine, integrated into its shrouded barrel. the Cimarron Henry Rifle can be had in .44-40 centerfire or .45 Colt chambering, in Standard Blue, Charcoal Blue or Original Finish. Here's a museum-quality replica of a classic firearm.

Case hardened steel frame
Calibers: .45 Colt, .44 WCF

Although only 1,731 of the revolutionary Henry repeating rifles were ordered by the U.S. government during the War Between the States, a number of private soldiers, as well as several regiments ordered these lever-action rifles through their own funds, such as those purchased by the celebrated 7th Illinois Infantry. Military-style Henry rifles bearing sling swivels and the stamped initials from government inspector Charles G. Chapman were also known to have been officially issued to the 1st Maine and the 1st District of Columbia Cavalry Regiments. Over 200 of these issue Henrys were captured from the 1st D.C. Regiment and in turn issued by the Confederates to their 7th, 11th and 35th Virginia Cavalry Regiments. The Rebs that faced them in the hands of Union soldiers dubbed them "that damned Yankee rifle that was loaded on Sunday and shot all week!"

Cimarron offers a dead ringer of these military Henry rifles, reproduced from an original in our antique collection! All Henry rifles were originally manufactured by the New Haven Arms Co., and like those 1860s-era rifles, our reproduction comes complete with the original-type sling swivels, and C.G.C. inspector's stampings. Approved by the North South Skirmish Association (N-SSA), this 24-inch barreled rifle is available in either .44-40 or .45 Colt chambering, and is finished in Standard Blue, Charcoal Blue or Cimarron's Original finish. Whichever finish and caliber you decide on, you'll have a gun that looks like the genuine article.

CIMARRON 1866 RIFLES

Originally known as the "Improved Henry" due to its patented loading gate on the side of the frame, designed by Nelson King, Winchester's plant superintendent, and the addition of a wood forearm, the 1866 model was known as the "Yellow Boy" by the Native Americans, because of its brass frame. The '66 model was the first true cowboy lever-action and the first that adapted well to carrying in a saddle scabbard, due to its slab sided design. With over 170,000 made between 1866-1898--it's popularity continued long after more powerful lever guns were introduced. The '66 model was famous worldwide, with guns used by the forces of Benito Juarez in Mexico, the Turkish army in their fight against the Russians and in the Wild West by such notables as Sioux Medicine Man Sitting Bull, the Union Pacific's chief engineer, General Grenville Dodge, and desperado Bill Doolin.

CIMARRON 1873 RIFLES

Arguably the most famous rifle of the Old West, Winchester's first centerfire arm was manufactured from 1873-1919, with more than 541,000 turned out before 1900. A frontier favorite since its debut, this lever-action rifle was produced in a number of variations from short Trapper models and carbines to short and extra-long barreled rifles. A few short years after the 1873 rifle was introduced it was often teamed with the famed 1873 Peacemaker and other sixguns that had been chambered for the '73's .44-40 (.44 WCF), .38-40 (.38 WCF), and .32-20 (.32 WCF) ammunition. The premier choice of the post-1874 Texas Rangers, this slab-sided saddle rifle was also favored by such well-known Westerners as Pat Garrett, William F. Cody, Montana Rancher Granville Stuart, and outlaws Butch Cassidy, Belle Starr and Billy the Kid.

CIMARRON 1876 & 1886 RIFLES

Originally dubbed the "Centennial Model," because of its introduction during America's 100th anniversary of the Declaration of Independence from British rule, and featured at Philadelphia's Centennial Exposition, this enlarged version of the famed 1873 Winchester was designed to handle stronger loads than its predecessor. With nearly 64,000 made from 1876-1897, the big '76 was one of the few lever-action rifles used by the buffalo hunters. It was a favorite with many big-game hunters of the era and was a favorite with future president Theodore Roosevelt.

Famous for always getting their man, the North West Mounted Police were hard men enforcing law and order in the rugged far-flung provinces of the Canadian frontier. The authority of the "Mounties" was stringently upheld through dedication, courage and the rugged 1876 NWMP carbine in the powerful .45-75 caliber!

The 1886 model, patented by John Browning in 1884 was brought to Winchester's attention while the two companies were negotiating for manufacturing rights to the 1885 High Wall and Low Wall. The 1886 was to become Winchester's Big Game repeater, often seeing action in Africa, and became Theodore Roosevelt's favorite until it ceased production in 1932. Today, original '86's in good condition bring a big premium from hunters and collectors. The Cimarron Model 1886 is every bit as strong and accurate as the original at 1/10th the price.

CIMARRON 1892 & MODEL 71 RIFLES

The Cimarron Model 1892 rifle is manufactured on John Browning's patents of 1884, the same patents covering the earlier and larger Model 1886 rifle. The 1892 was introduced by Winchester to replace the aging 1873 Model and was made in popular calibers proven in the Model 1873.

With the discontinuance of Winchester's famed 1886 model, in 1935 the company created one of the classic of 20th century big-game rifles by modifying the old '86 into the Model 71. Made in half magazine configuration with a pistol grip stock, this Browning-designed, 5-shot lever-action quickly became the rifle of choice and was very effective against any North American big game--including Canada and Alaska.

CIMARRON SHOTGUNS

Fast, reliable and sure, the old side by side has long been the favorite shotgun with many traditional shooters. From the days of the earliest scatterguns to today's sportsmen and competitive gunners, the double-barreled shotgun remains among the all-time favorites. By the early 1880s, exposed sidehammer shotguns were being phased out in favor of the faster, internal-hammered doubles, due to the automatic cocking of the hammers when the barrels are snapped shut. Whether used for hunting, law enforcement, guarding a stagecoach...or making a quick withdrawal from a bank, the hammerless double scattergun was the choice of gunners in the twilight of the Wild West.

Cimarron's 1883 model, available with either the broad "beavertail" type forearm or the sleeker splinter forend, and in your choice of 12 gauge or the .410 bore, our 1883 model can be had with 22-inch, 26-inch or 28-inch, blued barrels and receiver, single trigger and trigger guard, and a handsome walnut stock with a thick rubber butt pad. This is one classy shotgun for those side by side shooters who love the traditional blued steel and fine wood firearms!

By the 1880s, shotguns with internal hammers began to appear in the firearms marketplace, and rather than to have to cock the hammers manually, the internal hammers were automatically cocked when the barrels were brought to the closed position, and a sliding safety, mounted on the gun's top tang was added to the gun. Sleek and smooth handling, these so-called "hammerless" scatterguns quickly overshadowed the older exposed hammer smoothbores, offering faster firing--an important factor in the lethal shootouts that occurred in the latter part of the Wild West era, as well as in Cowboy Action and Cowboy Mounted Shooting competitions today!

Cimarron's 1889 models are offered in either 12 gauge or .410 bore size, in 18-inch, 20-inch or 22-inch, round side by side, blued barrels, and can be had with either a broad fore-end or the splinter-style fore-end. Equipped with a thick and comfortable black butt pad--with or without a white line spacer--our single trigger 1889 model is quickly becoming a favorite with today's Cowboy Sport shooters and other shotgun fans.

CIMARRON SHOTGUNS

The single best, and most economical arm for hunting and defense in the Old West was the side by side, double-barreled shotgun. Scores of thousands of these sidehammer scatterguns were a mainstay to settlers, miners, ranchers, gunfighters, and virtually anyone who needed a weapon. In times of civil unrest, many lawmen considered the scattergun as the best town tamer and express companies especially realized the value of these smoothbores and armed their messengers with them. They each knew the threat of scattered shot from a shotgun's blast had a greater chance of dissuading an unruly crowd or a road agent, than would the single projectile from a rifle or pistol.

Cimarron's 1878 Coach Gun, inspired by an original in our collection, is available in either the full-length 26-inch barrel, or the 20-inch barreled model, both capable of handling 3-inch shotshells, with the traditional exposed sidehammers, a pistol grip stock and schnabble forearm, blued barrels and a color case hardened receiver. When you ride shotgun, ride with a Cimarron 1878 Coach Gun.

This 20-inch tubed, 12 gauge side hammer "street howitzer" is reminiscent of the double-barreled shotgun handed to Holliday by Virgil Earp in the actual gunfight at the OK Corral, back in 1881 and similar to the cut down double of Tombstone movie fame, this twin-barreled smoothbore will deliver the goods in style with its handsomely blued barrels, color cased receiver, hammers and breech block, and topped off with the name "Doc Holliday" neatly engraved in script form on the shotgun's side plate.

Here's the lever gun that helped establish the repeating shotgun. Introduced in the West in spring 1888, this 5-shot smoothbore quickly became a success and saw fair usage during the latter years of the frontier. With nearly 64,000 of them made before 1899, the gun was carried by Arizona Sheriff John Slaughter, and the Denver & Rio Grande Railroad issued '87s to its messengers. Made from an original in our collection, Cimarron's 1887 Lever Shotgun Terminator comes with either a 22, or 28-inch round blued barrel, a color case hardened receiver, in 12 gauge and capable of handling 2 3/4-inch shotshells. Who could forget Arnold's 1887 model in the Sci-Fi action thriller Terminator 2: Judgment Day?

John M. Browning's first slide or pump-action shotgun became Winchester's 1893 model, designed to handle black powder shotshells. However, after encountering some mechanical difficulties and the fact that it was unable to handle the then-new smokeless powder ammunition, a similar looking, but redesigned and improved model--the famed 1897 pump shotgun--was brought out. The 1897 Winchester was not only an immediate success with both civilian hunters, but the military as well, and with well over a million '97s produced between 1897-1957, this scattergun was the best selling slide-action shotgun on the market and is undoubtedly the most famous pump shotgun of all time!

Cimarron Firearms has "The Highest Standards"

Cimarron Firearms' mission has been to bring today's shooters, Old West enthusiasts, and firearms nostalgia buffs, the finest quality replica guns, rifle sights, Old West gun leather, and shooting accessories possible. Working from original period guns in our extensive antique collection, our replicas represent the historic firearms from America's colorful frontier past. Starting with the era of the mountain men and free trappers with their Hawken muzzle-loaders, and the early Texas Rangers with their Paterson "five-shooters", Cimarron moves forward to the Wild West firearms of the 1860s and the post-Civil War period, with a vast selection of single-action sixguns, lever-action and single-shot rifles, and shotguns. We even include the classic 1911--in its original form--the pistol that chased Villa in Old Mexico, and fought "Over There" in World War One and beyond, including the 20th century classic sporting rifle, the Model 71 lever-action rifle. We're proud that our replicas are considered by many top shooters as among the very best firearms available anywhere!

Cimarron's replicas are manufactured to our carefully researched specifications. Unlike other replicas, Cimarron reproductions incorporate features found on original arms, down to the smallest details, such as original-type stampings, proof marks and other details that give our replicas that authentic look. They are then given the finest blue or nickeled finish available, or you can get your iron in our "Original Finish", that gives our guns the look of an antique, but with the capabilities of a brand new firearm!

We also strive to bring in replicas of firearms never before reproduced commercially--and at an affordable price to our consumers. For example, Cimarron was the company that brought shooters reproductions of such historic guns as the Richards Conversion, the Richards-Mason conversion, the 1872 Open Top, the 1876 lever-action rifles--including the unique full-stocked 1876 carbine. We were the first to offer a truly authentic 1873 peacemaker-style revolver, complete with beveled cylinder facing, proper hammer and grip style and factory-type markings. Our 7th Cavalry model and the Scout revolver are spitting images of those 7 1/2-inch barreled revolvers that rode with Custer's troopers and his Indian scouts at the Little Big Horn. Our U.S.V. Model is a dead ringer for those re-issued 5 1/2-inch single actions that served at San Juan Hill, in Cuba with Teddy Roosevelt's Rough Riders. Our Hollywood Series pays tribute to those legendary Westerners who galloped across the Silver Screen through accurate replicas of their distinctive sixguns, rifles and scatterguns.

Cimarron has gone beyond reproducing the most historic replicas by being innovative and thinking outside the holster, combining these legendary guns with new design elements that offer the serious Cowboy Action Shooter and the Cowboy Mounted Shooter the most competitive and sport-endorsed guns available today! Firearms like the Evil Roy Competition revolver, the Thunderer, the Thunderstorm, and the Thunderball, are just a few of our competition shooting irons that are all used by champions! But these are just a few of the Cimarron Hog Legs a modern-day frontiersman can enjoy. Turn the pages of this catalog and travel back with us into the colorful yesteryear of the American West, then decide which iron you'll want to pack on your own frontier journey.

Cimarron Champions

"Evil Roy" Gene Pearcey
SASS World Champion Shooter
SASS National Champion Shooter

"I would shoot any Cimarron Firearm Evil Roy revolver out of the box at any match."

"Outlaw Annie" Bianco-Ellett
CMSA World Champion Shooter

"I'm confident every time I go out and make a run."

Clayton Marxer
"The Adventure Cowboy"

"My Cimarron "Billy Dixon" Sharps is tough, always reliable, and puts an elk down with style!"

Phil Spangenberger
Old West Historian
Wild West Showman

"In addition to the quality and reliability of Cimarron's guns, they possess a certain look and feel that says 'Old West'."

Jim Rogers
Founder of CMSA
CMSA World Champion Shooter

"Cimarron Single Actions are at the top of my list for balance, reliability and authenticity. Attention to detail makes the Cimarron look and feel just like the originals of the late 1800s."

Diana Olson
CMSA World Champion Shooter

"My dad always said,, "buy the best you can afford, quality never goes out of style." Cimarron's balance and feel is second to one. I ride and shoot with confidence, knowing I have the best gun for the job in my hand."

"Pistol Packin' Paula"
World Champion Gun Spinner

"I love to twirl Cimarrons because they are very balanced guns and they are very sturdy guns for shooting."
